SIMONA AMERICA Awarded 2017 IAPD Environmental and Marketing Excellence Awards

SIMONA AMERICA Inc. accepted two awards at this year's International Association of Plastics Distribution Convention & Expo in Chicago, IL.

"We're proud of our company's involvement with IAPD. Our team's dedication to the organization through participation on various committees, volunteering at industry charity events, and engaging in professional skills development, has led to stronger relationships and influence within the industry," said Adam Mellen, CSO, VP of Sales and Marketing.

The IAPD Annual Awards Program was established to recognize members and associates of the International Association of Plastics Distribution who have demonstrated exceptional, extraordinary or outstanding service on behalf of the association and the plastics distribution industry.

SIMONA is beyond excited to have received two awards from IAPD this year. The Environmental Excellence Award recognizes the innovative or exemplary environmental responsibility by an IAPD member. SIMONA was recognized for its innovative warehouse lighting system, featuring an intelligent motion sensor lighting system, which regulates the lighting of the aisles depending on their occupancy which has resulted in a 15% reduction of electrical consumption. In addition, the facility launched a single stream recycling system, encouraging employee involvement in significantly reducing the amount of garbage sent to local landfills.

The Marketing Excellence Award acknowledges the innovative or exemplary marketing initiatives by IAPD member firms. It is a special recognition for those companies that promote the positive benefits of plastics and leverage all the marketing tools available to them.

"Receiving these awards from IAPD has inspired us to continue innovating and developing cutting edge products and solutions for our customer's needs as we make SIMONA a world class leader in the plastics industry," said Molly Bridger, Marketing Communications Manager.
